TOOLS GOLD

GOLD
Gold alloys that satisfy the work of discerning goldsmiths.

Each alloy is fully studio tested and approved.

We have tried many times over the years to find a trusted source to make our 22k yellow gold fusing alloy, but we always ended up disappointed with the results. If the alloy isn't exactly the proportions and made with .9999 pure gold (an extremely high level of purity most refiners don't bother with), the gold won't work or granulate properly, potentially causing many hours of work and bitter disappointment for the goldsmith. We were excited to report, that has all changed!

Classroom Lesson Plans

You can teach your students about finances. The lessons below are aligned with the national standards and are from The Council for Economic Education – an organization dedicated to providing K-12 financial education resources. Access more resources, including the entire Learning, Earning and Investing curriculum (grades 4-12) from the CEE, at www.councilforeconed.org.

- Middle and High School Lesson Plans
- Upper Elementary Lesson Plans

The Council for Economic Education (CEE), published the National Standards for Financial Literacy to provide a framework for teaching personal finance in kindergarten through 12th grade. The standards contain six areas of knowledge and understanding that are fundamental to proficiency in personal finance:

- Earning Income
- Buying Goods and Services
- Using Credit
- Saving
- Financial Investing
- Protecting and Insuring

Within each of the six standards are examples and benchmarks for what students should be able to understand. Use these standards to build a framework for teaching financial literacy in your classroom. To access the standards, visit CEE's website.

Congratulations!

Schools across the country are receiving grants to get financial education in classrooms. See what schools are serious about teaching this important curriculum. Your School could be next in 2013!
